

PHOTOSYNTHESIS INTENTION STATEMENT

At the end of 2024, Photosynthesis is more so a word-for-word readaptation of my stage musical, Turnover: A New Leaf. It has been developed as an ensemble play, perhaps with Parsley as leading character.

Turnover: A New Leaf logline: A plant-based animated musical comedy about how two business-owning families, who are rooted in prejudice, overturn their views when their queer kids start rooting for one another.

Here is an updated Photosynthesis. This beat board is the screenplay I will complete by the end of the course. The treatment has more details.

Photosynthesis logline: “In a world inhabited by photogenic plants, a cilantro and salon owner named Rau Ram tries to earn her green card in a garden that does not welcome her, her son Parsley, or other transplants.”

After a talk with my mother about this political climate, I am rewriting Rau as the protagonist due to her tangible wants for a green card, so she can lawfully buy out her salon business from the landlord. She believes all this would make her a respectable citizen of the garden nation of Woodwork. But her well-behaved son Parsley’s friendship with a new troublemaking neighbor Pyrus who’s helping him discover himself may jeopardize it.

Photosynthesis has a real antagonist compared to the idea of prejudice in Turnover. Rhizo Blomquist, the Secretary of Garden Security, heads the Customs and Soil Protection (CSP) which is the root of all evil.

I hope Photosynthesis engages audiences to consider immigrants’ struggle of needing to be picture-perfect members of society when they should be welcomed as they are. And that outsiders will never be out of the picture. Based on past audiences of Turnover, the appeal for teens and adults can still be from themes of diversity, inclusion, and following your dreams.

The feedback I seek is Rau’s development and tying it with (I believe) the B story of Parsley and Pyrus’s friendship in the later drafts. I’d like to hear your thoughts on the beat board. It is a major overhaul and rearrangement of the initial script. Thank you for your spacetime, Kimberly!
